FLOURISH PROJECT WELLBEING INDICATORS

The Flourish Model is a new and powerful ecological wellbeing framework that promotes community engagement and whole-systems thinking. Based upon the shared needs that unite us as humanity, it provides a simple way to map and measure wellbeing across whole systems. From the wellbeing of individuals, to that of families, schools, communities, care homes, cities and nations it helps show what we most value, to identify any gaps or areas that might need attention, to encourage dialogue (even within ourselves!) and collaboration and to facilitate local and context-led solutions. The indicators shown are currently those that we hope to test out and amend/improve through on-the-ground collaborations with our pilot partners.

1) For individuals

The model provides an easy-to-use framework to evaluate personal values and wellbeing, to help people better understand why they are the way they are, to identify personal strengths and weaknesses and to empower a sense of personal agency. We do this through:

a) a Personal Values Assessment (PVA) that shows the things that really matter to you in your life at this time.

b) an FVM Personal Wellbeing Survey that helps you to map how you are nurturing your own wellbeing over the seven levels.

PWS QUESTIONS: To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements when 0 means not all and 7 means flourishing

Security

- a. I feel safe and secure where I currently live
- b. I have enough to eat every week
- c. I have a healthy, balanced diet

Flourish Model- Adult Questions

GROWTH

In what ways am I currently supporting my own growth/inner development/spirituality? What am I currently doing to achieve a sense of inner /deeper connection or 'high'? What is my own definition of a 'Good Life'? What values would I like to see in society? What resources would I like to be able to access to support my own sense of meaning, connection and wellbeing?

CONTRIBUTION

Do I currently feel that that my voice and opinions matter and that I am being listened to? What could need to change/ could I get involved in for me to achieve this? What would I do to create a better sense of community? What resources would we need?

FULFILMENT

Do I currently have a sense of meaning and purpose in my life? What would need to change for me to achieve this? In what ways could I use my knowledge, skills and abilities? What needs to change for me to feel more happy and fulfilled? What steps can I take to help me get there? What resources would I need?

ENGAGEMENT

In what ways am I able to access continual new learning opportunities? How can I ensure that I can spend more time doing things that I am most drawn to/ interested in and love? How can I express my individuality?

INDEPENDENCE

Am I getting the support I need to enable me to be as independent as possible? What changes would I make if I could improve my current situation? How can I learn the things I want so that I can do the things I am most interested in/want to do? How can I earn an income that supports my basic needs?

RELATIONSHIP

How am I fulfilling my need to love and be loved? What can I do to more easily/better connect with others? How can I improve the nature and quality of my family relationships? How can I improve and develop my friendship groups? What additional resources would I need to feel more connected?

SECURITY

What can I do to ensure that I feel safe and secure? Do I have shelter, clean water and enough to eat? Do I live in a safe and healthy environment? And if not, what would I need to do to achieve this? Do I have enough income to support my basic needs? Am I getting enough exercise? Am I eating a healthy, balanced diet? Am I avoiding things that I know harm my system?

2) For Families

Using a simple Values, Beliefs and Behaviours worksheet developed with our partner the Barret Values Centre, the model aims to help families think about the generational patterns and the environmental factors that have shaped their own values, beliefs and mindsets. It opens up conversations, helps shape and contextualise personal stories, and engages whole families in a discussion about what creates healthy, happy lives and how to overcome the barriers to achieving them.

STEP 1: From the list below, pick the ten words or phrases that are most important to you. Feel free to add your own words

STEP 2: Now, really think about what's important to you. Pick your top three words. Circle your most important value.

Parents' Words accountability, achievement, balance (home/work), commitment, compassion, competence, continuous learning, cooperation, courage, creativity, enthusiasm, efficiency, ethics, excellence, fairness, family financial stability, friendships, future generations, health, honesty, humour/fun, independence, integrity, initiative, making a difference, open communication, openness, personal fulfilment, personal growth, respect, responsibility, risk-taking, self-discipline, success, trust, wisdom

Kids' Words doing what you say you will do, reaching your goals, balancing school work and playtime, working hard on what we believe in, being kind and understanding, being good at what you do, always learning, working well with other people, being brave, using your imagination, being excited and confident, making good use of time, doing the right thing, doing excellent work or sport, being fair, family having enough money, having friends, caring about children of the future, keeping healthy, telling the truth, laughing and having fun, able to do things on your own, being honest and trustworthy, making decisions for yourself, making life better for others, talking openly and freely with others, telling others about thoughts and feelings, having a full and happy life, improving myself, showing respect, being responsible, being brave to try something new, controlling my behaviour, being successful, trusting others, being wise

STEP 3: Now that you have identified your three values, complete the worksheet on the next page.

Family Values, Beliefs, and Behaviours

Write down your 3 most important values.	Why are these values important to you?	What do you do to show people these values? What are your behaviours?

STEP 4: Set aside one to two hours to share your worksheets with your family. Share stories about when you have seen them living their values. It's important that you take the time to really talk about it. The real learning occurs when you slow down and connect, to listen with your heads and your hearts.

STEP 5: Take a few minutes to write what you learned from this conversation. What were your key learnings?

3) For Schools

A school is more than just teachers and students. Instead it is a complex network of people, all of whom share the hugely important role of ensuring that future generations can grow up to become knowing, caring and thoughtful people, who are in tune with themselves, with others and with the natural world. The model engages schools in an exploration about human values and what really makes for good and meaningful lives. It explores big questions and future solutions, promotes empathy and deep-thinking and empowers students to make the personal choices that help to shape the future that they want, rather than the one that is imposed upon them.

The following School Wellbeing Indicators are suggested as areas that might be included

Level 1 Security

- The changing and dynamic nature of children's home environments is both understood and monitored as a key contributor to children's values, beliefs and behaviour.
- Parents are supported in providing stable and secure home environments for their children.
- The school environment is a safe and healthy place to be
- Nursing and wellbeing services provide high levels of safeguarding to protect children's physical health and wellbeing
- Nursing and wellbeing services provide advice and support to parents to optimise health and nutrition
- Pastoral and counselling services provide advice and support to children in times of adverse or challenging home situations.

4) Communities

Healthy environments are essential for flourishing communities. We are all nurtured and sustained by the way we feel about ourselves and where we live, and our ability to trust, respect and celebrate one another. Communities are defined by common interests, whether it be physical location, spiritual belief, faith group, sexual identity or stage of life. Each holds an enormous array of talent, skill and experience relating to how people live and how they can contribute to making things even better for themselves and those around them. The model supports communities in identifying their strengths, isolating areas that would benefit from specific focus and attention and promoting participation and compassionate action. It invites entire communities into a dialogue about what makes a good life and how we can work together to create a flourishing future.

Flourish Model- Community Questions

GROWTH

In what ways are we supporting everyone's growth/inner development/spirituality? How are we promoting kindness, generosity and compassion as core qualities of our community? What values would we like to see in our community? How do they differ from our current reality and what steps could we take to correct this? How can we support everyone's sense of meaning, connection and wellbeing? How can we ensure that we are contributing to a happier, healthier planet?

CONTRIBUTION

How do we ensure that local people's voices and opinions matter and that they are being listened to? How can we connect people up and help them feel part of a larger community? How can we promote a sense of community pride? How can we introduce fun and laughter into the process? What would need to happen to achieve this? What resources would we need? And how would we access them?

FULFILMENT

How can we find out what local people feel would give them more meaning and purpose in their lives? What would we need to introduce/change to achieve this? In what ways could we tap into and use local knowledge, skills and abilities? What small steps could we take to help us get there? What resources would we need? and how would we access them?

ENGAGEMENT

How do we ensure that everyone knows what is going on locally and can access new learning opportunities? How can we give people access to, and involvement in, the arts? How can we help people to spend more time doing and sharing the things that they are good at and love? How can we help everyone express their unique talents and individuality?

INDEPENDENCE

How can we ensure that we can support people in being as healthy and independent as possible? What changes would we like to make to the current system? How could we find out what people are interested in and give them more access to what they would most want to do? How could we tap into and develop new forms of community wealth?

RELATIONSHIP

How are we ensuring that nobody needs to feel lonely? What are we doing to support healthy partnerships and child & family relationships? How can we help people to develop friendship groups? What additional resources would people need to feel more connected? How can we reach out to disadvantaged and minority groups?

SECURITY

What changes can we make to our streets so that we can feel safe and secure? Does everyone have shelter, clean water and enough to eat? Do we all live in safe and healthy environments? If not, what would we need to do to achieve this? Do people have enough income to support their basic needs? Are they able to get enough exercise? 5) For Care Homes

The model enables those caring for the older members of society to measure and sustain the values and ethos of individual settings, to support and enhance the wellbeing of managers and team members, to better underpin and sustain the health and wellbeing of residents and to ensure the cultivation of cultures of dignity, compassion and respect.

Indicators still to come

6) For Cities

The model helps decision makers to understand, nurture and assess the local conditions that underpin the health of the city as a whole. Through actively engaging communities, and encouraging the creation of social hubs, it helps join up the dots, identify the gaps and develop practical solutions by working from the grassroots up. It works with leaders, policymakers and citizens to better understand and promote the health and wellbeing of their own communities and populations. It helps to ensure that child and family wellbeing and resilience is at the heart of all local decision-making and assists cities and local authorities to become Centres of Flourishing. Above all, it underpins the call for a more caring and compassionate world.

7) For Nations

A system of national governance aimed at promoting wellbeing needs to account for all of the impacts (both positive and negative) of its activities. This includes protecting the essential resources of the natural world (NATURAL CAPITAL), promoting circular and regenerative economies (ECONOMIC CAPITAL), optimising human capacities and potential (HUMAN CAPITAL) and valuing the goods and services derived from a healthy society (SOCIAL CAPITAL). The model helps to shift economies away from a narrow focus on marketed goods and services (i.e. GDP) to one focused on the sustainability of the planet and the need for a deeper 'Ecology of Wellbeing'. It provides a structured underpinning to the United Nations 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and, most importantly, puts the best interests of the child and wellbeing of future generations at the centre of all decision-making.

In this respect, significant innovation is already happening world-wide and the Flourish Model hopes to contribute its own thinking to the ecosystem of relevant stakeholders that have recently been forming around the following core areas of focus:
